National Advocacy Organization Provides Statements to Presidential Commission for the Study of Bioethical Issues in Washington, DC

CINCINNATI, Ohio (March 18, 2011) - Freedom from Covert Harassment and Stalking (FFCHS), a national organization which advocates for a halt to remote neural monitoring and electronic harassment of Americans, gave statements from over 25 individuals at the March 1, 2011, session of the Presidential Commission for the Study of Bioethical Issues, the first such body to be appointed in 10 years. A group of about 40 FFCHS members attended the session from around the country. FFCHS members requested an immediate Congressional hearing and investigation to expose a system of non-consensual experimentation not unlike the Tuskegee syphilis inoculations and the STD experiments in Guatemala, except its scope is significantly more extensive and its stealth, unprecedented. "There are major human rights atrocities happening right here in the US. Non-consensual government experimentation is one of the most important issues that we as a society face today", says Derrick Robinson, president of FFCHS.

With compelling accounts of the effects of remote neural monitoring, those presenting information told the Commission about the need for citizens' protection from non-consensual human test subject experimentation. They called for the Commission to give their attention to the numerous pleas and demands that have been made over the years to federal, state and local officials.

Dr. John Hall, author of A New Breed: Satellite Terrorism in America and a member of the FFCHS Medical Committee, informed the Commission of his having personally interviewed "upwards of 1500 victims" whose lives have been impacted by remote electromagnetic frequencies that are used in a covert manner. "We are seeing an alarming increase in the use of electromagnetic weapons - microwave auditory effect, silent sound spectrum, EEG cloning - which has taken the lab out of the laboratory and into the home", said Dr. Hall.

The existence of these weapons and their devastating effect is well-documented in government and scientific literature. In the early 70's, Congress, led by Senator Frank Church, conducted an in-depth investigation of the intelligence agencies which revealed the existence of the CIA's secret mind control program, called MKULTRA. After the hearings, the CIA officially abandoned these programs, however, whistleblower reports state otherwise and the corroborating accounts of thousands of victims indicate the illegal, non-consensual research continued unabated. The findings of the Church Committee Reports showed widespread privacy rights abuses in the actions of the CIA, FBI, and NSA which ultimately, were not adequately addressed.

FFCHS was formed to address the human rights violations brought about by the abuse of mind control technologies and to seek justice for those who are their victims. FFCHS therefore, is requesting a vigilant and uncompromising report to the president by the Commission and further seeks congressional hearings and an investigation into the covert activities of all US intelligence agencies.
